The Watershed

The UC Berkeley Fire Trail System follows the Strawberry Canyon watershed, one of the many natural resources of the East Bay. The University of California, Berkeley campus was founded in Strawberry Canyon in 1868 due to its close proximity to water sources in the watershed.

The Ecosystem

The Strawberry Canyon ecosystem is influenced by a variety of factors including: fire, native and non-native species, water, and human activities. The watershed serves as a wildlife corridor for many species such as deer, mountain lions and a wide variety of bird life. Unfortunately, this rich ecosystem is also threatened by development, pollution and trail misuse. Please pickup after yourself and your pets to minimize environmental degradation of the Strawberry Canyon watershed.

Trail Use Rules

Alcohol, bicycles, camping, dumping, fires, firearms, fireworks, motor vehicles, and smoking are prohibited.

Please enjoy the UC Berkeley Fire Trail System, and take time to appreciate the rich environment that surrounds us.
